Host-Chairperson, Dr. Fred Rérolle, vice-president HSF-France

Dr. Navneet BIDANI, BHMS, M.Sc. (Psychology) India

Every child is unique as is every homoeopathic medicine. The growing child, as he or she evolves toward maturity, passes through a series of stages of development, each one of which presents its own particular set of challenges that must be confronted. These archetypal stages of growth and learning are mirrored in the homoeopathic remedies, which are used to assist the child to take in stride the oft times difficult passages from youth to childhood. This presentation is all about exploring the positive traits of a child's multiple intelligences and a correlation of it with different homoeopathic medicines. With the recognition of such children types comes superior understanding, and with superior understanding comes the ability to better guide and assist a child to achieve his fullest potential.

Dr Rajaa CHBANI, homeopathic pharmacist, Morocco

Our health depends essentially on the biological quality of our food. This is why I experiment with homeopathic potencies on plants to avoid the use of chemical pesticides and fertilizers. I will present a study started on 1997 to the present day, on the application of isotherapy made from parasites of sick plants in Marrakech.

Can Homeopathy be an ecological alternative to the use of pesticides, fertilizer and weedkillers? Can it be curative and/or preventive of plants diseases and parasites?

Interest of the homeopathy in humanitarian medicine

The interest for the use of homeopathy in humanitarian conditions is quite evident. It is a very economical treatment, accessible to the poorest. It is also an ecological medicine, which respects humans in their environment and culture. We all well know the disastrous effects of bad usage and trafficking of our synthetic drugs.

HSF's objective is to teach homeopathy to health professionals, so the poorest can have access to cure. A few testimonies from cured acute and chronic cases will be presented.

Homeopathy, salt and biodynamics in agriculture

I started to call into question today's medicine and food production methods. And I found Alternative and Original methods in life that are just as effective and less destructive than the conventional way of farming. The resources are sometimes more readily available when we know what to look for. I see this as my life task to question and to share the knowledge for the benefit of mankind. The use of Homeopathy in farming is definitely a must for sustainable farming for now and the future.

Masi: help in the selection of the homeopathic remedy

Homeopathy is in constant progress, new pathogeneses allow us to give the simillimum more often, which leads to a “soft, permanent et definitive” cure. How to proceed in this profusion of symptoms? Dr Masi gave us a methodology that helps sum up in a short sentence the root of the disturbance responsible for the pathological disorder, expressed through symptoms already known or possible.

Patterns from evaporated droplets applied efficacy tests of homeopathic treatments

As shown by our research crystalline structures obtained from the droplet evaporation method (DEM) might serve for quality analysis of foods and efficacy tests of homeopathic treatments. During solvent evaporation particles create self-assembled nano- and microstructures, whose shape characteristics (like fractal dimension and symmetry exactness) correspond to the quality or health of the analyzed sample.

High dilution dose effect in plant-pathogen control

In modern agriculture there are few methods to control plant pathogens. Among them, the application of a classical genetic approach is only one environment-friendly, but these studies require long-term experiments and up to now there are relatively few resistance genes identified. Therefore, alternative routes must be taken in order to obtain plants resistant to pathogens for organic agriculture. The present study aimed to investigate the influence of high dilution dose effect of several homeopathic remedies for the control of plant pathogen.

Plants biodiversity in the Southern Atlas in Morocco

Because of their large size, their hostile topo-soil and climatic conditions, Saharan and pre-Saharan areas are strewn with remarkable phyto-biodiversity. They offer many services to the local population including beekeeping and herbal medicine from medicinal and aromatic plants. A novel perspective, very promising for these regions lies in homeopathy which they can help promote. Nevertheless it would be wise to preserve and encourage for regional sustainable development.

La sage-femme et l'homéopathie

-La grossesse est la période "idéale" pour utiliser l'homéopathie. En effet l'efficacité et la non toxicité de l'homéopathie en fait une thérapeutique de choix, qui accompagne la patiente durant sa grossesse, son accouchement et les suites de couches. Cet accompagnement homéopathique permet de traiter la mère sans jamais intoxiquer son fœtus en pleine embryogénèse...

La grossesse peut générer un cortège de "maux" souvent physiologique, et pourtant quelquefois très invalidant pour la patiente. La médecine allopathique ne répond pas à leur demande, n'apportant que des résultats partielles et engendrant souvent une crainte pour la futur maman d'un risque pour son enfant...
