Let Me Hear Your Voice: A Homeopath's Triumph Over Autism

Autism is a neuropsychiatric disorder characterized by severe and prolonged impairment in social interactions, deviant communication, and behaviors and interests that are restricted, stereotyped, or both. Reducing autistic characteristics and rehabilitating the child in mainstream society can be achieved through the classical homeopathic approach. Carefully selected homeopathic medicine brings about a qualitative change in a wide range of symptoms in autistic children. It also helps modify behavior to reduce hyperactivity, irritability, violence, etc. In this seminar, I would like to present evidence-based healing cases from my clinical practice over the past 23 years and share my approach to choosing a similimum.

Sylvie De Sigalony, Homeopathic Midwife France

Three perspectives for a «silent » case.

Clinical case :

This is a young Beninese woman, in a coma with loss of speech, consciousness and mobility, following an emergency scheduled cesarean. Given the complexity of this case, two unicist homeopathic midwives, responsible for postoperative care in an African clinic, called upon a visiting homeopathic general practitioner to examine the patient clinically.

The combined perspective of these three homeopaths enabled the selection of symptoms, their classification, and the choice of a single remedy. The young mother regained her physical and mental health in 72 hours! A winning trio!

Ghislaine Ghallab, Homeopathic ophthalmologist Morocco

Rémi HOSPITEL, homeopathic physician France

Jan Scholten structured the elements of Mendeleev's periodic table of minerals, giving meaning to each of the eight rows or series and each of the eighteen columns or stages of this table.

After the first hydrogen series, which answers questions of existence, differentiation, and conception, we move on to minerals, whose atomic weight increases separation and birth, the creation of identity, security and duty, creativity, autonomy, responsibility, and finally, the uranium series with radioactive actinides, disintegration and transmutation, with the ability to be reborn and find light in the face of serious illnesses. Similarly, each of the 18 stages corresponds to the ascent of a mountain, from initiation with dependence on the external structure in stage 1, to complete dissolution into gas in stage 18, passing through the summit, column 10, that of success and balance.

Recognition of the structural situation in which the patient has lost their healthy relationship and adaptation to the world around them, combined with an understanding of Scholten's theory, makes it easy to find the mineral that will lead them to healing. We will illustrate this presentation with a few clinical cases.

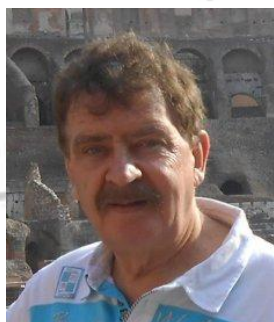

Jean Lacombe, Homeopath Canada

Homeopathic Approach to Autism:

I will focus on the lessons learned from more than 900 consultations with autistic children over the past 11 years. This experience will highlight:

- 1) A summary of the most frequently encountered symptoms (and references in Kent's repertoire).
- 2) A presentation of the most frequently used homeopathic remedies that produce the best results.
- 3) The prescribing strategy developed over the years that achieves the most significant improvements.
- 4) A brief summary of various other natural health approaches that can be combined with homeopathy to optimize results. Following this presentation, I will be pleased to answer questions from participants.

Didier NOTRE DAME, homeopathic veterinarian France

Comparison of the mental state of Arsenicum album and the psychology of cats.
This is a remedy that is often used in this species, with spectacular results.

Dr Muhammed Rafeeqe, Medical officer, Department of Homeopathy, Govt. of Kerala India

(author of 5 books and 280 articles, and speaker at more than 310 seminars across the globe).
Practical Homeopathic Clinical tips and Practice of Homeopathy in India.

In this two hours talk, practical and useful clinical tips will be shared, with indication of various Homeopathic remedies and differential diagnosis. The talk also includes some important findings we often come across in our clinical practice, that are very useful in successful management of cases. As homeopaths, we must also know some disease conditions by observing the clinical findings. There are different ways of approach to the case as per the situation of the patient and disease, so it is the case that decides the mode of approach. There are many useful remedies in Homeopathy, which are not fully utilized by Homeopaths, so those remedies and indications will be shared. The talk also includes points we should never forget...

Apart from the clinical aspects of homeopathy, the talk also includes the practice of homeopathy in India, and the activities of Homeopathic prophylaxis, some suggestions to develop and promote Homeopathy in different parts of the world.

Frédéric REROLLE, homeopath France

The benefits of homeopathy for residents of a nursing home (EHPAD).

Elderly people often have multiple pathologies, requiring multiple treatments.

Homeopathy can help to :

- Reduce the dosages and side effects of conventional treatments for chronic illnesses.
- Treat acute illnesses without adding allopathic medication.

We will present some homeopathic remedies frequently used during our experience as a nursing home doctor, and discover a very useful remedy for respiratory distress associated with SARS-CoV-2.

Patrice Rouchosse, homeopathic veterinarian France

We are 4.5 billion years old. This history permeates us. However long it may be, we find traces of it in our homeopathic remedies. From the first hydrogen atoms to the heaviest actinides, from marine unicellular organisms to amphibians emerging from the water to conquer the land, from reptiles to dinosaurs, from mosses to angiosperms. From extinctions to rebirths, to reach us, this astonishing and Dantesque history is read in our materia medica.

Dr. Jeremy and Camilla Sherr, Homeopath specialised in treatment of AIDS Tanzania

Jeremy will discuss a paragraph from his new adaptive translation of the Organon and its relationship with the noble gases and Kaballah. Camilla has been experimenting with agrohomoepathy for 15 years, primarily on the coffee plantations of Kilimanjaro in Tanzania, where she has been involved in the solution to converting chemical agriculture to organic farming using homeopathic remedies. In her lecture, she will discuss various problems that can be helped with homeopathic remedies, from soil treatment to parasitic control and maximum yield.

William SUERINCK, homeopathic psychiatrist France

The role of homeopathy in an integrative approach to elderly psychiatry.

Field observations in private practice and in a nursing home

Véronique Agniel: Director of the Chêne Vert facility in Septème les Vallons (which may be available via video, and with which we will try to make a short film about residents who have benefited from homeopathy).

Together, we will discover its material composition, its complex information-carrying structure, and, of course, how it can affect living things.

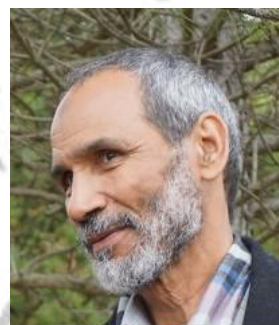

Michel VAN WASSENHOVEN, homeopathic physician director of the Dynhom research group, Belgium

What is a homeopathic medicine? Is it really as "empty" as some claim?

Together, we will discover its material composition, its complex information-carrying structure, and, of course, how it can affect living things.

While cutting-edge techniques can demonstrate these facts, it remains to be seen how this is possible. We will thus pay tribute to Professor Marc Henry, who gave us the theoretical framework that clearly explains all these results. Dr. Samuel Hahnemann would certainly have appreciated the modernity of his discoveries... What about You?

Abdelaziz YAACOUBI, agricultural engineer homopath DPE (Dynamics of Agricultural Engineering), Casablanca, Morocco

Evaluating the Potential of Agrohomoepathy: A Promising Agricultural Approach

A literature review evaluated the potential of Agrohomoepathy, an innovative agricultural approach initiated by Dr. V.D. Kaviraj in 1986. Based on homeopathic principles, this method aims for organic farming without chemical inputs. An analysis of more than 150 research articles published between 1994 and 2024, selected for their relevance (crop development, diseases, stress) and methodology (experimental designs), reveals significant potential. The results suggest improvements in yield, pest and disease management, and soil quality. However, the study highlights methodological limitations and a lack of standardization. Despite these challenges, the majority of studies report positive effects. The study recommends the establishment of standardized practices and guidelines for experiments to address these gaps and facilitate the transition to agroecological practices. Such a transition could generate substantial savings and improve human health. By contributing to the scientific debate on biological and ecological approaches, this study paves the way for wider adoption of agrohomoepathy as a sustainable agricultural practice.

Eric ZINS, organic farmer and agricultural engineer-homeopath France

"Some homeopathic experiences related to soil

Through several real-life cases from my farm, I will introduce you to the relationship between plant health and soil health. I will present the remedies, their reactivity, and the context for their use, as well as current research.
